ATLANTA, GA., SEPTEMBER 4, 1937. ANOTHER COMMUNIST CURED

Fred Erwin Beal, organizer of the tragedystudded textile strike at Gastonia, N. C., some years ago, has contributed an article to the American Mercury magazine in which he reveals, in dramatic manner, the disillusionment which followed his two visits to Russia, under Stalin rule.

Beal was convicted and sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment following the killing of Police Chief Aderholt, of Gastonia, during the strike terrorism. He was released on bail, pending appeal for new trial, and taken on a "triumphal tour" of many of the larger cities of the north by the Communist party. He was then sent to Russia to view Communism in practice at first hand. "It was an expensepaid trip-going over, but not returning." writes Beal.

Authorities, using the revelation as their main clue, have renewed the efforts to bring Beal into custody and make him serve out his sentence

There is confirmation as well as revelation in Beal's admission that the Gastonia strike was a "100 per cent Communist-led strike." Also in a following statement when he says. "Gastonia, and its interlude of bloody terror, was the ominous curtain-raiser of all the class warfare that has followed."

Such admissions from a man who was the organizer and leader of that textile strike in the south must provoke serious thought among the thousands of native textile workers who have. then and since, been the victims of outside agitators who sought to pull them away from their jobs and to use them for their own selfish purposes.

But it is Beal's reactions to conditions in the land of Stalin, the Russia of the Soviet, that provide most illuminative reading. He was, he admits, largely disillusioned after his first visit, but was not prepared to abandon his faith "in the revolutionary cause in America; to do so would be to repudiate the whole logic of

So he decided not to surrender to the North Carolina authorities to begin serving his 20year sentence. Instead he went to Russia for the second visit. For two years he worked, studied and observed in the "promised land" of all Communists. Then he left. To do so he had, literally, to escape. For he would never have been permitted to cross the border openly by the Soviet authorities.

Now, summing up his impressions of the country and the system that he had, all his life, idealized, he writes:

God knows I wanted to be convinced that the Stalin program was a vestibule to that ideal society to which I had consecrated my life. . . . But I could not . . . convince myself that the suffering and futility which I saw everywhere in Stalin land were but figments of the capitalist imagination. I could not live with the lie in my heart which is being carried today by every Stalin yes-man. After two years I resolved to return to America at any cost, and in the face of the fury of the whole Communist movement, tell the story of my disillusionment to a still unshackled American working class

There is tragedy in the discovery, by any man, that the cause to which he has dedicated himself, even unto the death, is false and unworthy. But if the workers of America, in the bitter words written by Fred Beal, learn the falsity of the Communistic theory, realize the cruel jest that lies in the social swamps beyond the will-o'-the-wisp of red preachments, his life and sacrifices will not have been in

He may, now that his own eyes are opened, save others from stumbling down the same evil road his own earlier footsteps followed.

BRITAIN AND OIL .

Formation of a number of companies to sink deep bores seeking oil in various parts of England draws attention to a situation which might easily have a decided effect upon the future of the "tight little island."

While geologists have, at various times, claimed that the indications point to the probability of oil deposits far below the coal strata of the United Kingdom, there have been almost no efforts made to strike oil in that country. British capital has preferred in the past to invest in oil enterprises in other countries.

Great Britain, at present, imports 99 per cent of the petroleum and petroleum products it uses. Should these imports be cut off in the event of some future war, the transportation situation would be so serious as to be practically fatal to the nation's defense.

The story of England's power is largely a story based upon her vast coal resources. With practically unlimited supplies of coal to be had for the mining, Britain was independent of power in the age when the black diamonds provided almost the sole source of motive power.

Should the claim of the geologists be proven true, and oil be tapped far below the surface of the earth, Britain would once again find an asset of far-reaching effect upon her future as a world power.

And America is doubly interested because of the fact that American oil experts have been called in to sink the experimental wells.

THOMAS J. HAMILTON

While the city of Augusta will most greatly miss the late Thomas J. Hamilton, the state loses in his death a brilliant newspaper editor and a leader who invariably gave all his enthusiasm to those causes which appealed to him as just and right.

It was in Augusta that Thomas J. Hamilton carved his career as a newspaperman and it was to Augusta and her betterment that he devoted the strength of his leadership. As managing editor of The Augusta Herald and as editor and publisher of The Augusta Chronicle he provided the inspiration for many movements which brought steady advancement to the Richmond county city.

He was especially interested in the development of the Savannah river as a channel of commerce to the sea. He visioned that stream also as a source of new power and prosperity for the Augusta region and when, a few months ago, he attended the official dedication of the great new lock and dam, a few miles south of Augusta, he saw the material realization of a long held dream.

He was a staunch Democrat, believing always in the eternal verities of his party's faith. He was honored in various ways by the national administration.

As a newspaperman he was popular with all his co-workers, not only those who worked with him in Augusta, but among the hundreds he knew in other cities. To them he was known as "Tom" Hamilton and, next to his family and the little circle of closest friends about his home, it is these fellow craftsmen who feel most keenly his unexpected passing.

"I KEPT ON PLUGGING."

About 10 o'clock on Thursday morning a man, almost overcome by exhaustion, crawled out of the Gulf of Mexico onto a lonely beach in Florida. He struggled, on his knees, across the sand to the line of brush above tide mark. There he rested until, by pulling himself forward by the rough growth, he was able to move forward a little more. Finally, as his strength returned, he staggered to his feet and stumbled to the highway. There, after a while, an automobile came along and he secured a "hitch" into Panama City.

The man was Addley Baker, who had been an oiler on the steamer Tarpon, which, early Wednesday, sank more than 20 miles out in the gulf. Baker swam for 25 hours and brought the first news of the disaster.

In a few brief paragraphs Baker told the story of his experience for the newspapers. "I swam in the direction I believed to be the shore," he wrote. "It was lonely. I thought several times it may be useless, but I kept on plugging. . . . I was getting very tired and sorta sick, when at daybreak I could see trees fringing the shore.'

The world, outside of the horror zones of war, may have become prosaic. Life may be safer and more monotonous for most of us. But adventure and heroism still live.

Fiction does not need to call on imagination when truth brings such experiences as that of Baker. Nor does youth have to turn back through the centuries for inspiration when it can read, in the words of a hero of today, "But I kept on plugging."

For that phrase contains the very essence of heroism, whether displayed in cold and lonely wastes of water, on the battlefield, in far, wild places, or in the daily routine at an office

RECIPROCAL TRADE PROGRAM

(From the Greensboro Daily News.) Since 1934, when the administration's recip-rocal trade program was inaugurated, American trade with signatory nations has increased $500,-000,000. Exports to countries covered by recip-rocal agreements have climbed 15 per cent, while those to countries outside the treaty pale have increased by only 4 per cent. Such a general business increase must have considerable effect upon the national life and economy. A sizable portion of this gain is in farm products themselves as noted by a study of official Department of Commerce figures. The increase which has gone to industry means that industrial workers and employes are in that much better shape to buy farm supplies and thus maintain high prices and subsidies in the agricultural field.

While imports of agricultural products have increased in some instances, it is well to conside what part the drouth had in this increase, how much artificial price stimulation, including actual destruction, for domestic products figured in the situation and how the consumer, who makes up the American populace in the aggregate, is to be protected unless by these outside shipments. When domestic sugar producers or cattle raisers cannot supply the home market, what is the point or the equity of shutting the doors and allowing them to squeeze the consumer's pocketbook to their hearts' delight? The south just now has a cotton surplus that it would like to sell to the world. The midwestern wheat growers have a bumper crop, with their saving outlet the shortage afforded by Canada's failing crop. EXPECT LULL IN WAR WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—While sharp attack and defense may continue in the Shanghai area in the next few days, close observers of the shifting military and diplomatic scene about the city predict a lull in major hostilities. They believe the International Settlement is safe for the present, and the evacuation of non-combatants assured.

There are two broad reasons, neither announced in official statements, for this predicted "lull." One is the success, temporary though it may be, of the diplomats who have been working long hours behind closed doors.

The second may be tound right up in the front of a little, commonplace book thumbed by corporals and, apparently, at the moment being read by Japanese generals as well. The volume is called "Infantry Drill Regulations" and it says, among many other things, that the object of warfare is the destruction of the enemy, not department stores, hospitals and filling stations.

Just what steps the diplomats took in helping to relieve the military pressure on the International Settlement are not revealed. But those in a position to know point to conditions affecting both China and Japan that are important factors.

and Japan that are important factors.

China, they say, of course, wishes to keep the friendship of the powers, for she hopes for intervention on her side.

Japan, those familiar with her possible future action say, is anxious to do nothing to jeopardize her own extraterritorial privi-leges. Continued encroachment on the territory of other foreign powers in the International Settlement by her soldiers might affect Japan's own position later.

CO-ORDINATION IS NEEDED On the military side, "the destruction of the enemy" means that the Japanese objective is to destroy the army of the Chinese now holding the terrain to the north and west of Shanghai. To do this a perfectly co-ordinated offense is necessary.

This requires time, for, while the invading forces are rapidly being augmented by the arrival of new transports from Japan, they cannot be immediately co-ordinated in the military sense. A military unit must be a perfect machine, an unbroken chain from the base to the most far-flung point in the line.

Before the "big push" really begins, such a machine must be perfected. When it is, it must be able to destroy with frontal attack or encircle and force into retreat the army now lying to the north and west of Shanghai.

The situation still favors the Chinese in that they can retreat in good order along their own lines of communications, which are in friendly territory, while the Japanese must guard their arteries

Military experts admit that there may never be a great battle in the Shanghai area. The Chinese might well retreat with devastating rear-guard action to a point where it would be bad strategy to Every inch the Mikado's men move further from their base their difficulties increase. They may simply push the Chinese as far back as practicable, dig in and then increase their offensive in the north. Here the Japanese hold the Nankow pass and have about as many men as the Chinese. Here, too, Russian eyes watch nervously.

Even those whose business it is to know what happens inside Russia hesitate to predict what she will do because of her internal situation. But action similar to that which she took in Spain is looked for. The Chinese don't need men, they need equipment and training. Nobody will be surprised if Russian officers and Russian planes turn up in the Chinese army.

TO CURB COMMODITY GAMBLING As foreshadowed in this column two weeks ago, the Commodity Exchange Administration has cracked down on the speculators in cotton and other products as the Securities and Exchange Commission did on the big, bad bears and wild bulls of Wall Street.

No immediate effect on the commodity trading is expected immediately, since large-scale gambling in this field is usually curtailed at this season. Some experts believe that the new regulations may tend to depress prices somewhat as speculators come in at this time and take care of "hedge" offerings which increase in volume with the increase of movement of crops to market.

My Dear Louise:

A lady you know, whose mind is uncommonly good, sat in a drug store yesterday, waiting for a long-distance telephone call which had her worried.

While waiting on the call, she wrote five letters and as many checks to pay household bills.

Before the last letter was completed, a friend stopped at her table and invited her to a fish supper that night. She was delighted and accorded the invitation.

Now, with all the evidence before you, do you know what hap-

The next time she thought about the fish supper, she was in bed and the night was half gone.

How in the world did she completely forget a matter of such importance? Well, a psychologist or memory trainer, knowing all the facts, would have been astonished if she had remembered it.

Our minds are mysterious things that develop habits as our bodies do. Then they operate independently of our will, and we can no longer trust them.

When your own mind betrays you, you are helpless indeed. But there is this consolation, that your mind develops only the habits you teach it. It does what you seem to desire.

By making notes and tying her handkerchief to her handbag, the lady had said to her mind: "You needn't try to remember this, for I am depending on something else." Thus her mind got out of the habit of remembering—or, rather, developed the habit of forgetting. And this time she made no note, but depended on her mind else.

Also her mind was concerned with other matters when she accepted the invitation, and she didn't concentrate on the thought of supper with sufficient intensity to make a mental record of it. of supper with sufficient intensity to make a mental record of So there, my dear, you have the explanation of your own forgetful-

Federal Officials Believe Commodity Exchange Act Is Being Violated.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—(P)—A federal survey began today to determine whether large speculators are trying illegally to manipulate prices of farm products. Federal officials suspect, it was indicated that the commodity excated, that the commodity ex-change act is being violated.

Dr. J. W. T. Duvel, chief of the Commodity Exchange Administra-tion, directed 900 commission firms to report on every commodity account, small or large, in which trading this year was controlled by any person other than the owner.

The check upon trading in wheat, corn, cotton and other farm products covered by the act comes at a time when prices of these commodities have been dropping. Duvel said the checkup was not inspired by these declines.

Instead, he said, officials here have "reason to believe" that some large traders are not reporting all transactions they control. He said violation could mean a fine of $10,000, a year's imprisonment, Sometimes trading under many different names may "trace back to a single source." That is not making the required reports, Du-vel said.

He added: "When experienced operators endeavor to build up trading power to influence com-modity futures prices and fail to report their entire transactions as required by law, they are violating the commodity exchange act, are guilty of a criminal offense will be prosecuted.'

Bill Hartman Moving at Old Time Speed; Passing Better.

ATHENS, Ga., Sept. 3 .- Georgia's football squad hustled 250,000 this year." through an hour and a quarter to clear the deck Saturday for the bit more. inaugural of hammer and tong work starting Monday.

Coach Harry Mehre peered from under a long-billed cap with a smile on his face this afternoon Showing of the squad this week, particularly, the passing backs, is beyond his expectations.

The genial Georgia mentor remarked later: "Anyway, we can't lose a game for a month yet," explaining that he is not counting on any trouble from Oglethorpe University, which comes here September 25. The University of South Carolina game on October 2 in Columbia is a Jonah, however.

SPEED IS AIM.

The first indication of the speed with which Coach Mehre will push the boys came this afternoon when he announced that should Tommy Haygood's bad knee fail to hold up under next week's intensive work, Haygood will be held out of games this season. The 225-pound Atlanta tackle will be given a heavy helping of thorough stuff. He was running in an ef-fort to strengthen the weakened knee this afternoon. He is in good physical condition but coaches do physical condition but coaches do not wish to take any chance on an early season reinjury of the knee.

Surveying the field one found other reasons, for Coach Mehre's smiles. Captain Bill Hartman is moving with his old-time speed. His hip injury last fall slowed him down considerably in the November games. His loss of speed then retarded the entire Georgia. then retarded the entire Georgia attack. In spring drills he showed improvement and his road work at camp during the summer completed the job. His speed is no worry at all now. Jimmy Fordham, another 200-pound fullback is also fast afoot.

In addition to seeking to gear up the attack, Mehre is trying for an effective passing combination. Aerial work was the major item and afternoor bender appeared here on July 11 he rightfully earned the title, "Wild Bill," and many of his competitors in the two-day grind will be wishing their mounts were equipped with rear-view mirrors. In the July classic Moore be-came involved in one of the pearfatal accidents when he crashed into the car driven by Gordon Chard. The mishap sent both men to the hospital and completely wrecked the machines. This was after the drivers had crossed the finish line and it was apparent to those in the stands that "Wild Bill" was so intent on the job at hand that he failed to see the checkered flag. Consequently, when Chard applied his brake directly in the path of the onrushing Georgian the inevitable happened.

That "Wild Bill" is loaded with more than his share of speedway stamina and coming back for more is a monument to his courage. His Stancil Special has been completely rebuilt for the occasion and he promises to keep a weather eye on the caution flags.

Grimm To Pilot Cubs Next Year

it. There really isn't any need to do so. Chattanooga was broken up from the start of the season by a series of unpopular moves. But what was most important was that Chattanooga had a very poor ball club from the day the season opene Chattanooga will not draw more than 50,000 and proby not that many will push through the turnstiles.

Knoxville has had a very poor ball club all year. It has lost more than 100 ball games. Apparently, no real effort has been made to put in a first-class ball club in Knoxville. The town is a good one and could draw better than 100,000 each year. It will do around 50,000.

Memphis hasn't drawn well for three seasons and won't until certain things are cleared up. The ball club wasn't an interesting one.

Birmingham didn't have the ball club of last year and also made the mistake of playing every game un-der lights, Sundays excepted. The owners got jittery when too few turned out for day games and went under cover of darkness. They forgot that the small day crowds add up and that the novelty of two night games per week will pack them in.

New Orleans made the same mistake-too many night games. And then, too, this is the worst New Orleans ball club

Atlanta is a bit off. But not too much. The team will draw in the neighborhood of 270,000. The loss might be expected from a club which hasn't been in the race all year.

Little Rock is drawing well over 150,000 and likely will reach 165,000. The alarmists point out that Kid Elberfeld drew 165,000 17 years ago without night or Sunday baseball.

He had as much population then and the Saturday games drew as many as do the Sunday games of today. Saturdays are not big days any more. Then, too, he didn't have night baseball.

Night baseball is vital to the minors. They can't get along without it. But in towns of the size of Atlanta, New Orleans, Birmingham or, for that matter, any others in the league, too many night games hurt rather than help.

The fans get too many opportunities to attend. Proof lies over at Cincinnati. That town gets seven night on today's bill of fare. More of it is in store for Saturday morning games per year. The attendance this year during the day is terrible. But the night games packed them in.

THE REAL ANSWER.

Too much night baseball hurts rather than helps. But the real answer is the ball club. The fans will go for the civic pride stuff on opening day. In New Orleans they never did. The people of New Orleans finally were "ordered" to attend. That, however, is another story. A backfield with Andy Roddenberry as field general and the other positions occupied by sophomores is proving up nicely according to Coach Mehre. It is composed of Vassa Cate at right halfback; Oliver Hunnicutt, at left half, and Jimmy Fordham at fullback.

After the first game of the season, the fans put the old eagle eye on a ball club and make up their own minds. If it is a good ball club which hustles and plays smart baseball, then the team will have a good attendance.

That holds true in Knoxville or New Orleans or here. Atlanta has demonstrated that. The fans stayed away with great enthusiasm until the new order came along. They then attendance as a series of leterals, or maybe just a forward and a lateral.

There is, after all, not much reason why fans should pay to see a last-place club play. There must, of course, be some last-place team. But it need not be hopelessly out of it. The last-place club owner, who hasn't made an effort in behalf of the fans, has a lot of oldfashioned brass to complain about poor attendance.

The Atlanta fans, with a team which hasn't actually been The signed entry of William out of the race as yet, have had a team somewhat below the Moore, Gainesville, Ga., has been caliter of those of the past two seasons. THE TEAM MANAGERS.

Owners do not pay enough attention to all the details when selecting managers for their clubs.

The first consideration should be whether or not the manager knows baseball and whether he can handle men. The second is almost as important. It is whether or not he can meet the public and talk with baseball reporters in a satisfactory manner.

After all, the baseball reporter is an integral part of the game. He is perhaps more vital than a first baseman or a good

Too many managers either can't or are unwilling to talk baseball, to recall stories, to aid in putting across their teams to the public. There is no reason why the manager should be a polished, drawing room character. But there is no reason why he should not be a man able to meet any group or segment of the population.

The late Johnny Dobbs perhaps met more of the requirements of the ideal minor league manager than any other one. In fact, one has but to look at the managers in whom the baseball confidence has been placed. Johnny fought for baseball. In fact, one of his pet peeves as the golf played by Judge Kenesaw M. Landis. "They pay him $75,000 per year," Johnny used to say, "and for what? So that each year he can go to Florida and have his picture taken playing golf. That's what for. To advertise golf. Why doesn't he give interviews on baseball instead of how his golf game is

Because most of the boys reported in such fine trim, Coach Alex and his assistants have been able to push the work and thus complish more actual good as regards formations and plays than in some time.

A test of the squad's condition was available yesterday. There was a drill of 45 minutes on the three-man bucking frame and on the tackling dummies.

The usual huffing and puffing was not in evidence, although, as to be expected, the lads were a bit spent when Alex whistled them to a stop.

Whereupon, there was time out for water and a breathing spell before tackling plays. DIFFERENT TACTICS.

Coach Alex is using different training tactics this season and the players are responding in admir-able fashion.

For instance, they are allowed a little water for drinking and drenching purposes during practice. They are allowed to rest a bit between strenuous drills.

All of which puts them in a brighter frame of mind. If they were denied a little water, as is the case in many football camps would have their mind on that as much as anything else. So the new training tactics are really

Coach Patrick Sure He'll Have Great Line; a double header on the Warrer athletic field Sunday afternoon

Coach John Patrick, of Oglethorpe, was having trouble sleeping. His entire football squad numbered 17 players. (Some of the bigger teams have that many players out for one position.) The Petrel coach couldn't help worrying. And sleep was as hard to get as football players. Instead of counting sheep, he started counting players—17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22—then sleep. There will be 22 candidates at Hermance field this afternoon. There were 20 on the field yesterday and Patrick got word two more were on the way.

IN RELIEF ROLE FOR BROOKLYN

Cubs Idle, Trail by Half Game; Turner Wins 16th for Bees.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 .- (A)-The Daffy Dodgers from Brooklyn trampled their old feudists, the Giants, 15 to 7, today to cut the New Yorkers' National league d to half a game. Jimmy Bucher hit a homer and four other assorted blows for the Dodgers. With the second-place Cubs idle, the defeat shaved the Giants' edge in half. Bucher and Babe Phelps, each with five hits, led an 18-hit Brook-lyn attack on Cliff Melton, Don Brennan and Tom Baker. The Giants, after being shut out for six innings, clubbed Waite Hoyt out of the box with a five-run spree in the seventh and added two more on Leiber's homer in the ninth. Jim Lindsey relieved Hoyt for Brooklyn and finished Jim Turner won his 16th pitching victory of the season today, but he had to have a lct of help from Roy Johnson and Vince

DiMaggio before he turned the trick by a 7-to-2 margin over the Phillies in 10 innings.

A five-run rally in the first half of the tenth, featuring Roy John-son's homer and DiMaggio's tworun single, finally won the game.

Johnson also hit a triple and sinle and drove in two runs, and Di-Maggio batted three across with a and a pair of singles. The Cincinnati Reds scored sevn runs in the fifth inning of their final floodlight contest of the sealast night and beat the St.

Louis Cardinals, 9 to 1. Pitcher Ray (Peaches) Davis allowed the Cards but five hits while the Reds collected nine safeties.

Schmeling, Louis Sign CHASE PUZZLES For June Title Clash DIMAG, GEHRIG AS GRANT, BUDGE

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—(A)—As a climax to the negotiations that have kept him busy for more than a year and have taken him across the ocean a half dozen times, Max Schmeling today signed a contract to fight Dusky Joe Louis for the world heavy-weight championship next June.

The bout will take place under the promotional banner of Mike Jacobs somewhere in the United States some time during the month of June, 1938. Further details concerning the time and place will be ironed out later.

Schmeling finally accepted a 20 per cent "cut" in the gate receipts, which Mike Jacobs confidently asserts will be over one million dollars, as well as substantial percentages of the radio and motion picture income. Louis will receive 40 per cent of the gate.

The contract, while it permits both Schmeling and Louis to engage in bouts between now and next June, gives the challenger complete protection in the event Louis should lose the title. If the Detroit negro should be beaten in the one or two tune-up bouts he expects to take on this winter, his conqueror is bound to defend the title against Schmeling.

Likewise Schmeling's activities are limited to such as are not likely to impair his status as a challenger. If he fights anywhere outside of Germany the bout must be promoted by Jacobs and under no conditions will he be permitted to meet Tommy Farr, latest victim of Louis; Jim Braddock, the former heavyweight champion; Bob Pastor, Max Baer or Buddy Baer.

BARFIELD SLAYER DEMANDS RETURN TO POLICE FORCE

Hartsfield and Morris' Lawyer Near Fisticuffs Over 'Ridiculous' Request.

A sharp verbal clash that threatened a fist fight between Mayor Hartsfield and George Finch, attorney for W. T. Morris, former policeman who shot and killed Police Lieutenant J. W. Barfield in 1931, featured a meeting of the police committee last Simultaneously it was revealed that Governor Rivers yesterday granted a full and unconditional pardon to Morris, whose life sentence for the murder of his superior officer was commuted in 1935 by Governor Talmadge.

Finch said Governor Rivers and Downing Musgrove, the Governor's executive secretary signed the pardon restoring Morris to full citizenship yesterday.

Reinstatement Asked.

The tilt between the mayor and Finch occurred when the attorney appeared at the committee to reiterate his demand that Morris be reinstated to the force and paid full back salary since 1931 on the grounds Morris was discharged without a trial by the committee

"This is ridiculous," Mayor Hartsfield asserted when Finch appeared before the committee exhibiting the pardon. "You seem felt need in Atlanta's business dishibiting the pardon. "You seem to have damn little to do." I'm like you," Finch responded. "Do you mean to tell me you are trying to get this man back on the force?" asked Hartsfield asked Hartsfield. Why, he's a murderer, isn't he? 'I did not represent Morris then," Finch replied.

"Get Out-Stay Out." "Well you can get out and stay out for the balance of this administration," the mayor said heatedly, as Finch left the room. 'Do you mean that personal.'

Hartsfield declared, however, that even if Finch won the Morris trial in the supreme court, he would have to be mandamused to

MY DAY

HYDE PARK, Thursday.—Our son, James, arrived last night to take up Mr. Marvin McIntyre's duties, but it is rather a peaceful time for him to do this, since they will all be leaving this afternoon for a few days' cruise. This always means fairly light secretarial duties. The President was busy finishing up all his last-minute pieces of work this morning, so that he might start with a clean slate and the feeling that the next few a clean slate and the feeling that the next few days were going to be at carefree as events of the world at large will allow.

On the way to the picnic which Mrs. Scheider and I were attending yesterday, my car suddenly began heating up to the danger point, and when I switched off the ignition, the engine continued to run. So in Danbury, Conn.,

I had to go to a garage and spend 40 min-utes getting the car put in order.

I was distressed about the people who were waiting to lead us to our destination, and finally the gentleman owning the garage drove me out to our prearranged meeting place. The others went on and Mrs. George Bye, who is always kindness itself, came back with me to the garage and waited until the car was ready to proceed, so we should not lose our way. I don't know of anything more uncomfortable than to keep a great many people waiting, particularly when they are hungry. But everyone was

Mr. and Mrs. George Waldo, our hosts, have a fascinating old house. The walls are paneled with great, wide, old board; the beams are hand-hewn, and the big old-fashioned fireplace with the oven back of it would be a joy on an autumn day.

Yesterday was too warm to contemplate a fire with equanimity.

We all sat around and listened to the records of the now famous softball games which Lowell Thomas inaugurated. The view at the back of the house is charming and soothing to the spirit,

On the way home I stopped in Poughkeepsie to do some shopping. Some time afterwards we had reached the cottage and I was starting to go through the mail when Mrs. Scheider, who has a good memory, suddenly burst in to announce that I had forgotten good memory, suddenly burst in to announce that a suddenly to file my column! I climbed back into the car and drove to Poughkeepsie, thinking back to the many times I have told my children that it is well to be forced to suffer some consequences of your forgetfulness, because it helps you to be more thoughtful in the future. But I was taking my own medicine just about as philoso-phically as the children used to do!

An old friend, Emily Sloane, the Countess De La Grance, whose husband is an official of the French government, spent the night with us, and it was a pleasure to see her. She is very charming

One of the most depressing things in this life is to look around and see the husbands and wives who are married and that's all: husbands and wives who have nothing in common but a name, roof, a family of children. What romantic affection they had for one another in the beginning has been so long cold that they no longer give it a thought, much less try to re-create it. What friendship existed between them has lapsed as an old insurance policy on which nothing has been paid for years. Laughter died on their lips long ago. The bartering talk, the playful exchange which they indulged in as young lovers and young marrieds has given way to grim conversation of domestic matters, mostly money

Let yourself go with this exercise:

Standing with one foot slightly ahead of the other, stretch the arms overhead. Inhale, and increase the upward stretch of first one arm and then the other. Now, exhale, and relax all over, letting the arms drop, the knees sag, and the spine go loose. Do the exercise three times to take away all tension.

If puss should haughtily refuse all else but salmon, woo him back to them, and you'll have a cat to be proud of—handsome, playful, happy.

Perhaps your first question is "will a cat thrive if kept indoors?" Yes. With the right food, a toy or two and a window sill, he'll have a grand time in the smallest apartment.

Passengers from the Chicago plane began coming through the station. Velma allowed her bloodshot eyes to stray over them indifferently. They looked too gay, too happy to have anything in common with her. She glanced down at the black crepe frock she was wearing under her mink coat, pulled her black hat down further on her head. It was fortunate that she had had a few somber that she had had a few somber that the black that the black had been that the black

An instant more and he had murder.

There was no sleep for Velma after this. She must reach Chicago, immediately!

She called the airport and was informed that a plane was leaving for Chicago in exactly half an hour. She made reservations. She would be on that plane!

She dashed to her small clothes closet, snatched out a suitcase, and began tossing lingeric into it. She had no definite plans as to what she would do upon reaching Chicago. She only had a wild impulse to get, on a swift plane that went there the quickest possible way.

It was daybreak when she reached the airport in a taxi, which had seemed, with its speed-ometer registering 45, to be merely crawling. Her wrist watch showed that she still had 10 minutes to get her tickets. Thank

Louise began laughing. She laughed so hard it was like a sharp knife in Velma's ears. "Stop it, stop it, Louise!" she cried. "Stop being hysterical!"

"Oh, that's simply too good! I'm not hysterical. You'll discover why I'm laughing, soon enough. I would like you to know—I've ther on her head. It was fortunate that she had had a few somber clothes for this emergency.

"Here you are, Miss Wilkins," said the ticket agent, holding out her tickets.

He spoke to a young woman nearly bereft of reason. She stood staring at some one as though turned to stone. She was staring at the suddenly illuminated countenance of the red-headed young threat of reporting to the police."

"I'm so sorry, dear. Louise must have known you had a twin brother—I'm certain of that now."

"Yes, she did know about him."

"Yes, she did know about him."

"Tom, dear—I never wanted to staring at some one as though turned to stone. She was staring at the suddenly illuminated countenance of the red-headed young threat of reporting to the police."

heaven, she had not lost that plane!

She threw a bill at the taxicab driver. She ran wildly into the station's nearly deserted waiting room. A siren blew for the ianding of a plane as she stood visibly trembling before the ticket window.

It meant nothing at all to her when the ticket agent remarked affably, "The plane from Chicago's just coming in."

"Yes, but I want the plane to Chicago," she said, slightly exasperated at this young fellow who tried to make pleasantries so early in the morning. "I'm Miss Wilkins." He wheeled about to find her tickets.

Gloria Was an Unlucky Woman

She was born between the two worlds for women -with a better than normal mind, executive ability, charm and ambition that had nothing to do with the old-fashioned woman's life. But then, with them, she demanded the fundamentals: love, a home and children-could she have everything?—was she to be picked out as a woman who could find the successful combination?
